Opening ceremony

The debate of this year's moot court competition focuses on the copyright infringement and unfair competition arising from the plagiarism of the game rules of mobile games. After a heated contest, the team of Strathmore University of Kenya wins the championship, the team of Beijing Institute of Technology wins the runner-up, and the teams of China University of Political Science and Law and Tongji University tie for the second runner-up.

On Sunday May 25th, the winners of the “Best Pleading Prizes”, the “Best Oralists” and the “Outstanding Oralists” are also unveiled at the closing ceremony. The ceremony is hosted by LIU Lijuan, Director of Intellectual Property Center, BFSU Law School. Associate Professor JIANG Ge, doctoral supervisor, School of Law, Tsinghua University, on behalf of the distinguished guests serving as judges of the moot court competition, commends the outstanding performance of all the contestants.

Winning teams are eligible for the cash prize offered by "Wanhuida IP Awards", a program created by the title sponsor to commend individuals with exceptional academic achievements and profound understanding in intellectual property law. Winning teams are also offered internship opportunities at Wanhuida on a first-come, first-served basis.

The BFSU - WANHUIDA IP Moot Court Competition is the only English competition that strictly abides by the rules for international moot court and focuses on international intellectual property laws in China. Wanhuida has been its sponsor since its first competition in 2008.
